GOWNS FOR THE HOME

OLIVE HARPER DESCRIBES SOME SIM-PLE BUT ATTRACTIVE DRESSES.

They May Be Readily Duplicated by Interested Renders-White Silk Stockings Are Again in Favor-Some Novelties in Lingerie-Dancing Dresses.

Correspondence of THE REPUBLICAN.

New York, Nov. 28,-In these days when every kind of goods is so cheap and so pretty and dresses are so plainly made, there is no excuse for a young girl being carelessly dressed. All that is required now in dainty dressmaking suitable for young ladies is a plain skirt with very scant trimming, and with here and there a deft distinguishing touch on sleeves or bodice.

HOME GOWNS FOR YOUNG LADIES. Two of the very prettiest dresses a have seen this year were made on s model that any one could follow. One was of hunter's green faille cut princess, with the upper part of the waist filled in, and the sleeves made of apple green crepe de chine. The corsage had two very narrow silver braids outlining the peasant's bodice, and straps of hunter's green velvet. A narrow belt and sash ends were made of apple green ribbon. This color can be worn only by a pure, peachy blond. In different russet browns, blues or any other becoming color or material it would be quite as taking a dress.

The other was of cadet blue cashmere, with a pretty passementerie of black and gold. The dress was cut entirely en princesse. A very odd and graceful effect was obtained by draping a width of white crepe de chine from the bust to the hips, and then letting it fall to the bottom of the skirt on each side. It is very simple and yet gives quite an elaborate appearance. The sleeves are balloon, with the forearm covered with the passementeries. This, however, is not necessary, and they could be plain or of other material

I notice among the new evening and dancing dress materials a beautiful new recollection of talking roughly to my silk tissue. It comes in all the evening colors, and among them pea green and apple green, two shades that light up beautifully. This tissue is plain and striped. The plain is lighter, but the striped gives a very fine effect, and much afraid in the beginning of a fight and all variety can be brought out by different through it. Of course he does. He has ways of cutting the tissue. It is stiffer reason. Sherman said of General Sumthan chiffon and stronger than tulle, and | ner that he was the only man who grew makes the ideal dancing dress.

The prettiest slippers in the w seen now for dancing. They are of white, pearl gray and black, as well as of some delicate tints, and are made of undressed kid, with rather high red or black heels, and the toes round up to the pertest little point, as if they were just ready to twinkle off in a frolicsome dance and could hardly keep still. Some few have fine steel or pearl bends worked on them, but the most are plain. The plain ones look smaller on the feet.

White silk stockings are now the newest and prettiest. There are those of other colors, but white, with dainty mull skirts, with their plume ruffles, are quite too pretty for anything.

There is a strong leaning toward hand crocheted lace for trimming all undergarments now. Hamburg edgings are made by machinery and have become too common, imitation laces do not wear well or look well after a washing, and real lace cannot bear many washings, and hand embroidery has not the lightness that seems to belong to the fineness of finish necessary to underwear. Crocheted trimming is strong, durable, pretty and has an unmistakable appearance of patient hand labor, so it is now the trimming. Yokes and sleeves to chemises are made of it, insertions and ruffles for drawers are crocheted, and it surely is the right thing in the right place for once. Dainty baby ribbons are run through the meshes and tied in bewitching little knots.

A very handsome carriage and walking costume for a young married lady so struck my taste that I reproduce it The camail cape was of black broadcloth, with the underfront of black velvet. The cape was richly beaded. The skirt was of black ladies' cloth, quite plain, with a 4-inch band of marten at the bottom. A collar of the same to the cape and a high buttoned collar to the velvet and a fur.

facing to the CARRIAGE AND WALK- camail made of it altogether a ING COSTUME. uperb cutfit, particularly with the addition of the four story hat, often trimmed with velvet, plumes and this-OLIVE HARPER.

THE DRYAD.

have seen her limpid eyes, Large with gradual laughter, rise Through wild roses' nettles, Like twin blossoms grow and stare. Then the hateful, envious air Whisked them into petals.

I have seen her hardy cheek, Like a molten coral, leak Through the leafage shaded, Of thick chickasaws, and then, When I made more sure, again To a red plum faded.

I have found her racy lips, And her graceful finger tips, But a haw or berry, Glimmers of her there and here, Just, forscoth, enough to cheer And to make me merry.

Often on the ferry rocks
Dazzling dimples of loose locks
At me she hath shaken, And I've followed—all in vain! They had trickled into rain, Sunlit, on the braken.

Once her full limbs flashed on me, Naked, where some royal tree Powdered all the spaces With wan sunlight and quaint shade— Such a haunt romance hath made For haunched satyr races,

There, I know, hid amorous Pan; For a sudden pleading ran Through the maze of myrtle, And a rapid violence tossed All its flowerage-'twas the lost Cooings of a turtle.

-Madison Cawein in St. Joseph's News.

What One Man Saw in One Day.

"I saw three very curious things yesterday; remarkable, they were. Coming in on a suburban train I sat down behind a women as black as ink. She was a full blooded negro, and her hair was as straight as yours or mine and as soft as velvet. I don't think there is another such case in the world.

"Walking up Broadway later on I saw an electric wire catch fire and burn in twain, the pieces falling to the ground. There were no cross wires nor any wire nor anything within ten feet of it when it caught." He rested awhile.

"Say! Ahem! When I was eating supper last night I found a worm-a black, shaggy worm an inch long-in a fresh egg. You see I have my eggs served to me in the shell and eat them with a spoon from the shell. As I dug down into the yolk of one brought me at a fashionable restaurant I saw something black in the center, and pulling it out discovered what I have told you. The egg was sound as a dollar. The way I figure it out is that an old hen swallowed a worm just before the egg began to form and the worm got tangled up in the machinery and got stuck. Well, I must be going. Good day,"-St. Louis Republic.

Fear Refore the Fight.

Testimony differs as to the feeling of the soldier on going into a fight, and the many experiences related by Grand Army men to their always willing listeners show that in their war histories there was no uniformity of either fear or daring. The major of a New Hampshire regiment said: "I always felt timid when the shot began to reach us, but as soon as we got into action I was carried away by excitement. I am not usually a profane man, and I have no troops, yet a good many of them have assured me that all through a fight I would swear like-well, like a trooper."

Another man, a colonel, said: "It's all nonsense to say that a man doesn't feel bolder as he grew older, but the only man I ever saw who really seems want to fight, and to enjoy it after he was in it, was Custer."—New York Sun.

Tetherball is a new game of English origin which possesses the pronounced advantage of being played in a few feet of lawn or courtyard. A post eight feet high is set up, and to this is attached a cord having at its end a ball. The space of the grounds may influence somewhat the length of the string, which should be, however, not less than eight nor more than ten feet long. The ball is set in rotary motion, and with tennis racquets the two players endeavor in turn to hit it. The game is said to be exciting, and decidedly a warm contest, as the ball proves very elusive.-Exchange.

Libraries, Museums and Methods.

Modern museum methods applied to libraries will result in a vast extension of their general usefulness and availability for the purposes of instruction, and in the modern museums the exhibition of books has become almost as important as the display of the conventional museum specimens.-Philadelphia

The Truth About Girls.

A small boy in a Brooklyn grammar school has furnished the latest information about girls in a recent composition: "Girls is pretty and afraid of guns. They wear toe rubbers and look at the clouds and say, 'Oh, how perfickly lovely!" "-New York Times.

Of the 218 suicides reported in New York city in one year, shooting was most popular with 77 cases, to 48 by poison, 87 by hanging, 23 by gas, 16 by knife, 10 by drowning, 4 by jumping from a roof and 3 by jumping from a
